"ALL PURPOSE" SIXES SENT FROM FACTORY

Peerless Motor Car Company Starts Shipments of Popular New Type Car.

Shipments of "All Purpose" sixes, the new light, short wheelbase six-cylinder car that was announced recently by the Peerless Motor Car Company have been begun from the factory in Cleveland.

This car was presented to the public along with the "All Purpose" four six weeks ago, but deliveries of four were begun first. Dealers in all the prominent cities will have six demonstrators within a few days.

The interest in the new six-cylinder model has been very high, and a great number of orders were taken by the Peerless Company before it was able to show the car to its customers.

The car has a 21-23 inch motor cast in block. The wheelbase is 111 inches, only eight inches longer than the four. Both the "All Purpose" four and six were designed with an short wheelbase as is compatible with a roomy body, in order to secure the advantages of light weight and easy handling in crowded city traffic.

All the additional wheelbase length in the six over the four is taken up in the hood to give space for the longer motor. The body design is of the pure stream line design and very handsome. It seats five passengers in the open type and seven in the limousine.

The body is built of sheet aluminum and ash, and is identical in construction and design with the bodies that have always been mounted on Peerless cars selling from $4,300 to $7,000. The platform rear spring suspension and the silico manganese steel that is used as material produces an ease of riding in this car similar to that of the highest grade cars of much larger size and greater weight.

The Zeil Motor Car Company represents the Peerless Company in Washington.

Willbur Says Plays Similar.
Dean William A. Willbur, of Columbia College, and professor of English literature at George Washington University, was a witness before Justice McCoy yesterday, where he testified as to the similarity of Philander C. Johnson's "Dr. Finkbeiner" and "The Beauty Shop" in which Raymond Hitchcock is starring.

Prof. Willbur was a witness for Mr. Johnson, who is suing Hitchcock, Channing Pollock and others for infringement. Mr. Johnson was a witness in his own behalf at the morning session. Justice McCoy adjourned the case until Monday.

FRANCE BATTLE DEATH RAIL

Officer Describes Fierce Street Fighting with Germans.

CANNONADE IN DARKNESS

Soldiers Carry on Struggle by Light of Burning Houses—Rescue Wounded Under Fire.

London, Dec. 3.—Much heroic street fighting has taken place in France to which no publicity has been given. For instance, one officer writes home as follows:

"The other night we had to attack a town in order to try and secure the bridge over the river on the other side of it. During the day we had got one tiny corner of it, and as soon as it got dark were able to bring up the dismounted men and guns. There were some crossroads in the middle of the village, barricaded and held by the Germans. The road down which we had to make an attack was slightly curved about 150 yards from the barricade, and behind the barricade was a square with about thirty-yard sides. There were about three smoldering houses, one behind and to the left of the barricade.

"The gun was man-handled down to the bend in the road, and then six rounds were fired at the barricade, with the object of blowing it down. The squadrons were drawn up in troop columns one behind the other in the rear of the gun.

"These troops were to make an attack on the barricade, three troops were to guard the side roads coming in from the right between the gun and the barricade, and the other three were to guard our rear and line of retreat.

Germans Spring Surprise.
"The gun went off suddenly and brought down the glass all over the place on our heads. When we thought the barricade was down we rushed down the street toward it, and on reaching it found it was intact. As soon as we started pulling it down the Germans opened fire from the streets and houses. We pulled a Maxim up into the window of a house, some of us stood in the streets and fired, others tried to break into the houses on either side, and the noise and crashing of a burning house was appalling.

"After about ten minutes the Germans retired around the corner toward the bridge. In looking around the corner we found another barricade about seventy yards away. They opened on us with a Maxim and started throwing flames. The guns started firing over our heads. It is impossible to describe the scene. Sometimes it was pitch dark, and then the flames would shoot up from the houses and show the men crouching in the doorways or lying behind the barricades we had built on the side roads.

"We hadn't enough men to take the second barricade, so for some time one of our poor fellows, shot through the head, lay in the square. We were there from 5 till 1:30 in the morning, and just before we got the order to retire, three men volunteered to go out and bring in the wounded man from the square.

"They had to take their boots off and run over in the dark, and I can't describe how they brought him in, all in front of a Maxim and the Lord knows how many men only seventy yards distant."

GIRL FILLED BROTHER'S PLACE.

Score of Women Amazona Prove Fighting Metal in Russian Army.

Petrograd, Nov. 25.—In the Russian army there are at least a score of women in the fighting line, all giving a good account of themselves. said Lyubov, a Soviet fighter, who was wounded in the hospital at Novgorod, confidently awaiting a visit from Tass.

Lyubov is twenty-one years old, blond, with expressive eyes, a gentle manner, and a sturdy frame. Looking at her lying on her bed—a wounded warrior—you would never think she had earned the sobriquet of the "Amazona Amazon."

Pretty Lyubov hails from the unpretentious village of Ostropka, where her father is the village priest. She tells the story of how she came to be a soldier in unassuming language.

"When my brother, Ludovik," she said, "was the result of wounds, I determined to do his place, as Gen. Tannenkauf did not know of his death. I was enrolled in the Seventh Army Corps and a time was in the fighting line under the great soldier. My first battle was at Gumbinnen. My trouble was killing a man. I didn't mind shooting him so much, as then I would not see him fall. But when it came to charging with the bayonet, I could not bear to feel that he would go under at my thrust.

Other Czechs took part in four big battles and would be now in the thick of it on the Vistula had not she received a slight wound from a shell splinter, which, being neglected, brought on fever. She kept the secret of her sex by pretending to be particularly rough and callous.

CANNOT BARTER LICENSES.

Excise Board Refuses to Countenance Their Sale or Purchase.

Bartering in liquor licenses will not be tolerated by the Excise Board. Robert Smith, chairman, yesterday stated encouragement would not be offered those seeking to sell or buy.

John J. Burke, who was refused a retail license at 63 Third street southwest, made application for a transfer of the business of G. W. Hall, 27 Four-and-a-half street southwest.

Other such transfers have been requested, and this is believed to have caused the board to object to this practice.

Jacob Sani applied for a transfer of the wholesale license of Frederick D. Pierce, at 204 Seventh street. Attorney A. E. Shoemaker of the Anti-Saloon League objected on the ground the square in which the place is located is nonbusiness.

Patrick J. Wholihan applied for a wholesale license at 1009 Sixth street southwest.

Luke J. Croghan applied for a wholesale license at 717 Fourth street northwest. He was recently refused a barroom license.

Henry Bloss applied for a wholesale license at 508 First street northwest. He recently was refused a barroom license.

Cabinet Members to Speak.

Some notable additions, including two members of the Cabinet, are announced to the list of speakers for the eleventh annual convention of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress, which is to be held in this city on the 11th, 12th, and 13th of its month. The opening address, on Wednesday, will be made by the Secretary of State Bryan. An address will also be given by Lindley M. Garrison, the head of the War Department, which has entire charge of preparing the plans and executing the works of river and harbor improvement. Col. Goethals has cabled saying conditions have arisen which make it impossible for him to be present.

FRENCH SPARE LIFE OF GERMAN AVIATOR

Birdman of Kaiser's Aeroplane Corps Lands Among Foes After Companion Dies.

Rotterdam, Dec. 3.—A German aviator who owes his life to a French officer's chivalrous cry, writes to his father: "It is a miracle that I am still alive after my experiences of the last few days. I left one morning in my aeroplane with Lieut. J., an aviator of first rank, to reconnoiter the movements of the enemy's troops around Sedan. Near Betrix we were caught in rainclouds and had to descend to 1,000 yards. Immediately we heard the sound of shots. A whole division of the enemy was firing at us.

"I, who was piloting, was struck in the stomach. The motor stopped working, and the aeroplane descended gradually in a violent turn toward the enemy's lines. When we were about 800 yards above them the machine dipped suddenly. I turned around and saw that J. had fallen back in his seat dead. A second bullet had struck him in the forehead. I seized the controls and managed to restore the equilibrium of the machine. I was aiming at the forest beyond the French lines.

"The minutes during which I planned at a height of 200 yards above the enemy seemed an eternity. Rifle bullets whistled around my head, and I suddenly felt a violent shock in the temple. Blood poured down and nearly blinded me, but I still held my hand on the controls.

"But the machine struck an air pocket, almost capsize, and as the dead body of my comrade interfered with my steering, I had to land among the enemy.

"When the plane struck the ground it turned right over and flung me on a considerable distance. French soldiers ran at me from every side.

"I took out my revolver and shot down three. A moment later I felt a bayonet point against my breast. Then an officer ran up, shouting:

"Don't kill him; he is a brave man."

"The cry saved my life. I was taken to a general, who asked me for certain information, which I refused to give. They dressed my wound and gave me red wine to drink.

"The aviator then recounts how, during the confusion caused by a German attack, he succeeded in escaping and returning to his own lines.

WOULD BUILD RADIO STATIONS.

Admiral Griffin Seeks Appropriation of $500,000 from Congress.

Appropriation of $500,000 for the erection of four high-power radio-telegraph stations, to be located on the Isthmus of Panama, on the Hawaiian Islands, on the California coast, and in the Philippines, is recommended by Rear Admiral R. S. Griffin, head of the Bureau of Engineering of the navy, in his annual report.

Rear Admiral Griffin points out that the United States Navy is foremost among nations in the development and application of radio-telegraphy, and urges that facilities be supplied for the further development of this branch of work.

The ability of the navy yards to construct battleships as efficiently and as economically as independent contractors was emphasized by Rear Admiral Griffin.

SUCCESS IN CAMEROON CROWNS BRITISH ARMS

English Officer Gives Graphic Account of the Capture of the Duala by Cruiser.

London, Dec. 3.—British arms have been successful in the Cameroons, a German possession. An English officer gives this account of the capture of the Duala:

"On Friday and Saturday a British cruiser moved up the Cameroon River, lay about three miles off Duala, and comfortably bombarded the town out of reach of the German fort.

"At the same time a landing of a small force of troops was attempted, but the enemy was in such force there that the landing was given up.

"The Germans had sunk at least ten steamers in an absolutely unsuccessful attempt to block the channel. On Sunday, Duala disliked the cruiser's shells so much that they hoisted the white flag and surrendered the town.

"The Lord was with us in a most marvelous manner, as not only was the enemy unsuccessful in blocking the channel, but also not one of our floating mines did any damage to us. Our small patrol boats succeeded in blowing up about twelve of them by rifle fire, and we heard the enemy lost eleven men in the making of these mines. It has since been ascertained that the British patrol boats landed on Donabon on the other side of the river. About two hours after our landing, just at dusk, the alarm was sounded and we had to take our posts and prepare for an attack. However, no attack came, and later our company was relieved, and I got a good sleep from 10 till 4 o'clock, when we had to take up our outpost positions again.

"In the river above Bonabon the general had withdrawn nine steamers of the Woermann Line. About 7 o'clock this morning (D.M.) and two other submarines were detailed with 100 men to accompany the naval party going up to take over these steamers. We went up on a little tug. As we approached the Hans Woermann, the largest of them, we had all our men ready with rifles loaded, as we were not sure what sort of a reception we should get.

"But instead of bullets we were greeted with rounds of British cheers and hurrahs—on board were some thirty English, including two women and a baby, who had been kept prisoners on this boat by the German ship crew.

"When the British flag went up in the Duala the German crew threw all their arms and ammunition overboard, and received us with civility and quietly, although sullenly.

NAVAL EXPERT SEES GERMAN INVASION PLAN

Britisher Says Kaiser's Scheme Means to Mine Straits of Dover and Attack with Navy and Army.

London, Dec. 3.—H. W. Wilson, the naval expert, thinks the plan of Germany for invading England is as follows:

"She hopes to capture Dunkirk, Calais, and the stretch of French coast as far as Cape Grizet. She would then run two lines of mines across the channel, the southern line from Cape Grizet to Dungeness, the north line from near Ostend to Deal, immediately to the south of the present British mine field. These two chains of mines will enclose the Straits of Dover and greatly hamper or prevent the patrol of the straits by the British warships.

"On the continental extremity the mines will be protected by the motor gunners which Germany proposes to mount along the French and Belgian coast—when she has captured it. Some years ago Sir Percy Scott predicted that then existing twelve-inch gun was able to throw its shells across the Straits of Dover, and the German gun should have an effective range of eight or ten miles in clear weather.

"But protection against British mine sweepers and trawlers would be given by the German submarines, which presumably would be gradually brought down along the Dutch coast, and which would concentrate in the harbors of Ostend, Dunkirk, Gravelines, and Calais, and possibly by fast merchantmen, specially strengthened, with one or two heavy guns mounted. To the Channel fleet, the alarm was sounded and we had to take our posts and prepare for an attack. However, no attack came, and later our company was relieved, and I got a good sleep from 10 till 4 o'clock, when we had to take up our outpost positions again.

"In the river above Bonabon the general had withdrawn nine steamers of the Woermann Line. About 7 o'clock this morning (D.M.) and two other submarines were detailed with 100 men to accompany the naval party going up to take over these steamers. We went up on a little tug. As we approached the Hans Woermann, the largest of them, we had all our men ready with rifles loaded, as we were not sure what sort of a reception we should get.

JAPANESE DEVELOPING GERMAN POSSESSIONS

Send 1,000 Laborers to Work Phosphate Mines in Islands Taken from Kaiser in War.

Tokyo, Dec. 3.—The Japanese are rapidly establishing administrative government in the islands which were captured from the Germans in the South Pacific. Within a week after news had been received here of the capture of Jaluit, several officials were dispatched to the Marshall Islands to investigate their trade and development possibilities and also to work the phosphate mines, and other officials have gone there to the Marshall Islands to investigate their trade and development possibilities and also to work the phosphate mines, and other officials have gone there to the Marshall Islands to investigate their trade and development possibilities and also to work the phosphate mines.

Several steamers have been taken over and a steamship service established between Tokohama and all the islands now under Japanese sovereignty. Carcasses of Japanese merchandise are already on their way.

The most interesting feature of this industrial occupation of the islands which the Japanese foreign office declares were taken for military purposes only, is the sending of 1,000 Japanese laborers to work the phosphate mines, and the inclusion in the budget which will come before the diet in December of an appropriation for the investigation of the mineral resources of the islands.

The expansion of Japan to the south Pacific has created a great deal of jealousy among the Japanese, who look on it as another step toward Japan's domination of the Pacific.

THE GREAT WHITE WAY

By O. O. MINTYRE.

New York, Dec. 2.—It is a tough job Clayton Hamilton, who collaborated with A. E. Thomas, in writing a comedy now current, has before him. He is a dramatic critic and now that he has turned playwright must review his own work. Rough! Ah, 'tis a cruel, cold war—rude.

For a number of years Hamilton has conducted the dramatic departments of the Bookman and Vogue. He must now say some pretty or ugly things about his own play just as his fancy dictates. It is said that Hamilton is going to slip out from under the whole thing by praising the show, but giving all of the credit to his collaborator, Mr. Thomas.

John Hedger, who says he can run for governor as well as any other man, and not be elected, was the toastmaster at a banquet the other night where he introduced a well-known speaker of the evening who happened to be from Ohio.

"Ohio is proud of Mr. Blank," he began. "The cities have already disputed over his birthplace. It was here that the Ohio man strove to look modestly deprecating." Dayton claims he was born in Toledo—and Toledo insists the honor belongs to Dayton.

Society in New York is showing that its members are not all "social butterflies," but appreciate responsibilities and act accordingly. The war in Europe has made the drain on the big donors to charity very heavy indeed.

Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt and Miss Rutherford gave a wonderful fete at the Hotel Biltmore the other night for the benefit of the Russian Red Cross. Three ladies dropped all of their social activities to make the affair the huge success which it was.

The services of Louis H. Chalf, graduate of the Russian Imperial Ballet, were secured for a magnificent short ballet representing Russian peasants who came to greet the great landowner and were in turn feasted by him. It was said to be the most gorgeous spectacle ever presented for a private entertainment.

Mr. Chalf also presented a Russian solo dance and there was also a representation of his popular ballroom dance, "La Russe." The patronesses included
